Critic's Corner

Great fun for the entire family! If your family is into spill containment. I didn't even know what an IBC Spill Pallet was but by the end of the movie I was shouting at the screen, "Don't forget the Bucket Shelf, Elliott!!!"

Critic's Corner

There's a bottle of odor eliminator on the movie poster... I didn't have high expectations. But it didn't stink (get it?). One good whiff and you'll be convinced too. Matt Shaw squirts a spray bottle like no one else in Hollywood. Two noses up... wayyy up!

Critic's Corner

After Wastewater World, I thought Clancy's career was over, but he hit 300 with this one! Paul Sander is believable as an engineer but I prefer him in the action/adventure roles. And a movie about Containment Berms? I wasn't expecting much, but they were driving in, they were driving out, spills everywhere, frac tanks, tanker trucks... this movie has everything!

Critic's Corner

I consider myself a traditionalist when it comes to spill containment so when I heard they were going to animate the Rapid Rise Berm, I was not happy. But I am a HUGE fan of Mark & Dale (they're my bosses), so I decided to watch it. And I was not disappointed! Run, don't walk to see this one! Best animated containment berm movie ever!

Critic's Corner

He's cool and all, but he canNOT do what a Track Pan can. Nobody can. Is he modular? Can he connect himself to other Track Pans? Does he come with gaskets that prevent spills from getting between him and the railroad tracks? No! I didn't think so. Can I turn right-side up now? I can't feel my head anymore.

LOVE the product! I can understand why SOME call it “the Holy Grail of Coatings”. But this movie, and more specifically the cast, was just a bit too freaky for me. I mean, just look at Sam Bates! To be honest with you, I don't think he was really acting at all.

Critic's Corner

As superheroes go, this guy is one of my favorites. He's tough. He's funny. He's got a huge arsenal of weapons. And, best of all, he knows a good spill response product when he sees it. As a man of action myself, I know that you can't be loaded down with heavy/bulky pools. The Ultra-Pop Up Pool works for this guy... and it works for me. But then again, I kiss guns.

Critic's Corner

Ken Strange as a simple-minded, albeit very kind dewatering boy? A little far fetched if you ask me. But funny and entertaining nonetheless. The Ultra-Dewatering Bag has always been one of my favorite stormwater products. In fact, the water I'm drinking came out of a local swamp. But it's okay cuz it got filtered with an Ultra-Dewatering Bag!

A splendidly written cinematic masterpiece with extraordinary performances delivered by Chris Ferguson AND his scooter. Everything from the musical score, to the directing, to the casting was inspiring. Not to mention some of the best key-gripping I've seen outside of Lucas Studios. Ha ha! Just kidding. It was stupid.

I grew up in the streets of Philadelphia. I know what it's like to filter pollutants out of stormwater using inferior products. So I proudly stood on my theater chair and cheered on Socky (with just about everyone else in the place), when he not only knocked out the typical stuff like oil and sediment but even (SPOILER ALERT)... heavy metals!

Critic's Corner
He's cool and all, but he canNOT do what a Track Pan can. Nobody can. Is he modular? Can he connect himself to other Track Pans? Does he come with gaskets that prevent spills from getting between him and the railroad tracks? No! I didn't think so. Can I turn right-side up now? I can't feel my head anymore.
