A movie poster for 'Pallet of the Apes'. The top half features a close-up of a man's face on the left and a gorilla's face on the right, both looking towards each other. The man is wearing a grey polo shirt. The gorilla has a red mark on its forehead. The text 'NO BLOOD WILL BE SPILLED' is centered between them. Below this, a man is riding a dark horse that is rearing up in a yellow pallet. The man is holding a rifle high in the air. The background shows a suspension bridge (resembling the Golden Gate Bridge) with a section of it on fire. In the foreground, several other gorillas are visible, some looking towards the camera and others towards the man on the horse. The overall scene is chaotic and action-packed.

Critic's Corner

For a film created by men, it wasn't awful. Matt Clancy was believable as an Engineer and I even found myself feeling sorry for him and empathizing with his situation. Don't get me wrong, I beat my chest with glee when he got his arms ripped off by my cousins, but for a short while I found him endearing. Michael McGregor scared the bejezzus out of me.

Critic's Corner

I've seen a lot of thing in my day and I get that this film is based in a fantasy world, but a Containment Berm with walls that "magically" rise if there's a spill?? Come on!! On the bright side, Chris Ferguson wields a mighty wand and looks quite dashing in his bowtie.

I'm not Asian but I eat takeout all the time. And even though I wear polo shirts to the dojo and hold my sword like a baseball bat, I know a good kung fu / stormwater flick when I see one. Strange, Davis, McGregor and Hahn were good, but the Drain Guards stole the show.

Critic's Corner

With Dale Shaw as One Drum Woman, the future of pallets is bright indeed. I laughed. I cried. I cheered as leaking drum after leaking drum was rescued from certain doom. Dale has paved the way for environmental heroines on screen and off. Will these bracelets really deflect bullets?

I'm usually not a fan of war movies but Sonja Day was so JACKED UP in this flick, I was on the edge of my seat watching her kick ass. Seriously though, she looks like she has the body of... oh, I don't know... Brad Pitt. What a transformation! I tried wielding a knife like they did in the movie but got it stuck in my teeth.

Critic's Corner
For a film created by men, it wasn't awful. Matt Clancy was believable as an Engineer and I even found myself feeling sorry for him and empathizing with his situation. Don't get me wrong, I beat my chest with glee when the girl he's courted is ripped off by my cousins, but for a short while I found him endearing. Michael McGregor scared the bejezous out of me.
